1. Is contemporary society a disciplinary society?
2. How useful is the notion of cultural capital for understanding contemporary society?
3. How can signs be ideological?
4. Outline and assess how sociologists have characterised the key features of modernity?
5. How useful a term is 'postmodernity' for contemporary social theory?
6. Critically discuss contemporary feminist discussions of 'sex' and gender.
7. Should sociology talk of 'feminisms' rather than 'feminism'?
8. Is it useful to explain contemporary social problems in terms of the tensions between systems and the lifeworld, as Habermas does?
9. 'The monological ideal seriously underestimates the place of the dialogical in human life' (Charles Taylor). Discuss this statement using examples from debates generated in contemporary social movements to illustrate your answer.
10. What does James O'Connor mean by 'the second contradiction of capitalism'? Evaluate his attempt to combine Marxian sociology with ecology.
